I. Preface

The violin is a wonderful instrument. I love the sound of a solo violin accompanied by an orchestra or larger ensemble. Therefore my goal for the last decade was to collect information, recordings and scores of the compositions for violin concertante. This book presents the results of my research.

But why publish a book of tons of drouthy facts? First it gives you a very complete overview about the compositions for violin concertante of the 20th century. You can search for a special work by a specific composer and check the details: When was the work composed? Who performed the premiere? Where can I find the score? Or you just browse the book to get some new information or ideas. I once read about a violinist who wanted to perform a different Triple concerto for violin, cello, piano and orchestra to the one of Beethoven. He thought there was just the Beethoven triple concerto and nothing else. He then commissioned a new work by a modern composer, which indeed was nice as well. But if he had have the chance to study this book, he would have found more than 50 already existing triple concertos for violin, cello and piano just from the 20th century!

The second reason goes beyond this book, because collecting facts is not my favourite pastime. I would like to promote the unknown, forgotten or rarely performed works. Knowing of their existance is the first step, but how to find the superb works among more than 12.000 compositions is the second one. I thought about grading works, but that is just my personal and very subjective opinion. You can ask for my personal view of course, but it is not included in the book. I would rather have you get your own impression, and for this you have to look and listen yourself. Therefore I own recordings for more than 6.000 compositions and several hundreds of unpublished scores, which build something like a violin gathering point. So here is where it all comes together. A point where all the people interested in this wonderful instrument may meet and gather information about modern works. Please feel invited to stop by at my point, take a seat, get a very good cappuccino and listen to whatever you want to listen to and rummage in the scores. You can find and reach me here:

So hopefully this will help to bring the one or other unknown composition on stage. At least one time my research already led to a premiere of a violin concerto. During the preparation of this book I contacted the composer James Niblock about his 1950 violin concerto. After this contact he retrieved the score from the basement of his house. Violinist Walter Verdehr spotted the score during a visit at the Niblocks, studied the score and agreed to play the premiere which took place just 2 months ago. That such things will happen again is my third and main goal.

And you can contribute to this task as well! Thousands of information about the listed compositions are still missing, and I surely missed some composers and their works in total. Therefore I am grateful for every addition or correction. I will include your information and publish a revised edition every summer so that everybody can benefit from every single contribution!

To improve the violin gathering point I am also looking for recordings and scores of the listed compositions. For each work you can see if I already own a recording and/or a score. I would also be delighted if you can provide a missing recording or score!

And finally please share this document to other interested persons or institutions. So the idea is:

use!
share!
contribute!

II. Elaboration of terms and concepts

This book provides information about the compositions for solo violin of the 20th century. What does that mean in detail?

Each composition that contains at least a solo violin part and an accompaniment by an orchestra or larger ensemble was included to this book. I also added all compositions that carry the word concerto or its derivatives in the title and have a prominent or soloistic violin part. Due to this definition the book includes for example:

Concertos for violin.. and orchestra / .. and strings / .. and ensemble / etc
 Double concertos.. for 2 violins / .. for violin and piano / etc
 Triple concertos.. for string trio / .. for 2 violins and piano / etc
 Concertos.. for string quartet / .. for violin, cello, oboe and horn / etc
 Rhapsodies.. / Elegies.. / Fantasies.. / etc ..for violin and orchestra
 Duos / Trios / Sonatas concertante.. for violin and piano / .. for violin, viola and cello / etc

I only included compositions that were written in the 20th century. I also thought that it would be of interest to know what was composed immediately before mankind entered respectively immediately after mankind left the 20th century. Therefore I expanded the 20th century to the time span from 1894 to 2006. That means that a composer who wrote works for solo violin before and after 1894 (for example Camille Saint-Saens) is not listed here completely with his/her violin output. In these cases I only put the works composed in 1894 or later into this guide. Same goes for the other end of the time span.

For some works I could not find a year of composition. I nevertheless put the work into this guide if the composer lived at least some of his lifetime between 1894 and 2006 because it could be possible that the work was written in that time, but of course I have no evidence.

Each listed composition looks like this “file card”:

composer (life dates)
composition
opus:	?	duration:	? min	year:	?
instr:	?
mvt:	?
sco:	?
wp:	?
com:	?

The abbreviations are explained in detail below:

composer:

I sorted the compositions in this book individually, i.e. each of the „file cards“ shown above contain information to exactly one composition. The compositions can be found under the alphabetically listed composer surnames. So if you are looking for the Violin concerto by Edward Elgar, you have to look under Elgar, Edward and then search for the Violin concerto file card under his name.

Names are sorted under the surname of the composer. I decided that name elements like de or von belong to the forename (so Gottfried von Einem is listed as Einem, Gottfried von). Name affixes like Dr. or Sir are not part of the name. The names are written in the most common English transliteration, i.e. names from languages with Non-Latin alphabets (like Russian, Greek, or Chinese) are listed in the English equivalent. All specific letters from foreign languages (like é or å) are left out, besides the German ones.

life dates:

I list only the year of birth and - if deceased - the year of death of a composer. If I could not find an exact year of birth, I researched biographical information (for example the year of M.A.) and reasoned the approximate year of birth. This is indicated with around X. In this case the year of birth should be in a range of ± 5 years. If I could not narrow the dates down to this range I used the terms before Y and after Z to indicate that the composer was definitely born before the year Y or died definitely after the year Z.

(=headphones):

This sign means there is a sound recording of the composition in my archive. Which means you can stop by at my violin gathering point and listen to the composition to get your own impression of the work. There is no difference in the sign whether the recording is commercial, archival or completely private. This kind of information and the performers or other details can be provided upon request. All my recordings are digitised.

(=note):

This sign means that a score of this work is part of my archive. Again you can stop by at my violin gathering point to take a look into the sheet music. The scores are either real copies or pdf files.

composition:

This line shows the title of the composition and a short description of the instrumentation. This is obvious for works like a Concerto for violin and orchestra. Other compositions have titles that don't show the rough instrumentation like The lark ascending. In these cases I added a short description that mentions the solo instruments and the accompanying orchestral formation, i.e. The lark ascending, for violin and orchestra.

I translated composition titles into English whenever I thought I could get a serious, fitting translation. For this reason there are for example no Keman Konçertosu or Koncert skrzypcowy, just Violin concerto.

opus:

This mainly speaks for itself and contains the opus number. In a few cases composers developed a personal numbering system with additional letters or they numbered their work not chronologically. I transferred this information as exactly as possible.

duration:

For all compositions I give the approximate duration in integers. If I own a sound recording, this document was my main reference. If I had several different recorded performances I calculated an average of all durations.

This means the year in which the composition was written. If I could not find exact information I tried to find hints in other documents (first publication of the score, premiere of the work, newspaper articles, etc) and narrowed the year of composition down from this information. I indicated that in writing before X, after Y or around Z.

instr = instrumentation:

There are several shorthands to show the instrumentation of the composition. I chose the following:

flute/oboe/clarinet/bassoon - horn/trumpet/trombone/tuba - timpani/percussion - harp - strings

This leads to shorthands like: 2222-4000-10-0-str, which means: 2 flutes, 2 oboes, 2 clarinets, 2 bassoons, 4 horns, 1 timpani, strings

Additional instruments to this shorthand are added at the end after the strings, separated by a hyphen. For a few instruments I used abbreviations due to their regular use:

pf = piano
cel = celesta
hrpsd = harpsichord
org = organ
gtr = guitar
sax = saxophone

vln = violin
vla = viola
vlc = cello
db = double bass
perc = percussion

Other instruments I wrote down in full. If an instrument is the electric version of an acoustic instrument, I put the abbreviation „e.“ in front of the word. So an e.gtr is an electric guitar.

I do not list the solo instruments in the instrumentation field. They are mentioned in the field composition.

mvt = movement:

In this field I show the titles and/or tempi markings of the different movements of the composition. The movements are counted by Roman numerals (I, II, III, IV, V, etc). If I had only found out that a work has three movements, but found no further information, I wrote down I - II - III to indicate this detail.

sco = score:

This field lists the publisher of the score. Many compositions are first published here, later there and finally somewhere else. During my research I did not check to find the latest publisher, I only list a publisher who released the score at least sometime in the past. In many cases publishing houses were bought by other publishers and later sold to third parties. The information about the publisher could therefore never be definite. So take the good part from the information: If there was a publisher, most likely a library somewhere around the world holds a copy and so a score is easy to find.

In many other cases compositions did not find a publishing house. Then I tried to find the location of the manuscript or a copy of it and listed the name of the archive (libraries, city archives, music institutions, etc). Please have in mind that this archive does not necessarily have the original manuscript archived, maybe only a copy of it.

And if you can get the score only through the composer (due to the fact that he/she is still alive), I noted composer. And if he/she is deceased and no archive pays attention to the papers I noted composer's estate.

wp = world premiere:

Here information about the date and the performers of the first performance are given. The date is given in the form dd.mm.yyyy. If I could not find the exact day or month, unknown details are marked with an x. So the date xx.03.1974 says that the premiere took place on someday in March 1974. The performers are listed behind the date in brackets. For all performers I just mention their surnames. All persons written in front of the orchestra are the soloists, the person written behind the orchestra is the conductor. Unknown identities are indicated with a ?. So the information (Oistrakh, Leningrad Philharmonic Orchestra, Mravinsky) means that the violin soloist was Oistrakh, the performing orchestra was the Leningrad PO and the conductor was Mravinsky. If I found no information about the performers I only listed the date.

com = comment:

This field contains all the additional information not fitting into the fields above. That means in most cases the dedicatees of the work, won prizes, different other instrumentations, or interesting facts about the composition or its performance history. This field also contains the birth names of composers who later changed their names (due to emigration, pseudonym for artist reasons, sex change, marriage, etc).

Please have in mind that the descriptions mentioned above are general information about each composition detail. These descriptions fit for most of the compositions, but naturally not for all due to the diversity of compositions in the 20th century. If you find an entry that leaves you puzzled - keep it easy and drop me a line. I will check and explain it.

III. A word about references

In this book I list more than 12.000 compositions by more than 7.000 composers. It took me more than a decade to collect this data. To get this information I visited more than 100.000 websites of music information centers, publishing houses, libraries, composers, musicians, encyclopedias, etc. I also looked through hundreds of books, and asked thousands of composers and artists directly. If I wanted to make a reference to each information about its source, I would surely have to add 10.000 pages of references. I didn't do that. This is not my doctoral thesis, and so I don't feel bound to the academic restrictions. If you want to know the source for a specific detail, please ask me directly.

Finally I can only say: I checked so many sources, talked directly to so many composers and artists and found a lot of mistakes in other serious resources – for good reasons you simply have to believe me.

com:	the composers idea with his concert piece was to project an image as phenomenon of sound. Over the movement of five lines on a graphical surface, five violins should be playing. The register of the violin was divided into 2½ intervals (the area of the violin), and the line indicated which interval one was situated in. The measurement of time was marked out as units along the lower edge of the paper. The patterns of the lines were taken from a subject by the Flemish artist Rubens, which implied an awry and very simple proportion, that is to say 3:4. To say divided into 2 parts and 3 parts. Fantastic sound fountains appeared, and the sources of the fountains were shown on the wall, through a slide projector as a giant painting. com:	- spoken text in the composition: "Quel poids dans mes pieds ralentit me pas !? Fatigué je m'arrête. Le chemin ardu a débouché sur la porte mystérieuse qui me sépare encore du but de mon voyage. La lutte est terminée, le bruit du monde s'envanoui. De derrière le mur, j'entends la mélodie paisible du violon, cet appel irrésistible qui me fait savourer délices du retour dans le pays natal. Je te sens proche ami ménestrel, qui met fin à cette Odyssée tant d'erreurs et d'impasses! Ouvre la porte que je me jette dans tes bras ..." - comment by the composer: A reminiscence from my youth sustained me: in the bedroom of my father, who was often ill, there was a self-portrait of Arnold Böcklin which imprinted upon me the image of the standing, violin-playing "Friend Hein" in the picture. I still could hear his playing: those sounds seemed as if they came from another world, offering the last hope for those despairing of mankind. I immediately remembered his double-stops, and the theme of the whole work developed in my ear: the first step had been made. Death, putting all earthly things into perspective with his comforting music...could that be the right motif for a 500 year anniversary of belonging to our confederation? First I had to assure those who had commissioned the work of my acceptance and let them know that a harp and timpani needed to be added to the requested instrumentation. And they agreed! Then I took another step forward: in the middle of the composition, at the end of the slow movement, I felt a need for a voice to appear. The spoken text would be surprisingly audible via the loudspeakers, and remove the work from any stereotypical comparisons to other concert hall or celebrity-related works. After waiting a long time for his response, I was quite delighted when Menuhin gave me a phone call brimming with enthusiasm not only for the solo part and the accompanying music, but also for the inclusion of the programmatic spoken text. "This brings a whole new dimension to the idea of a violin concerto."
